

Child & Family Education

The ABCs of Success

Early childhood educators play a formative role in the physical, social, emotional, and intellectual development of young children and are a critical component of their future success.

AVC's Child & Family Education program gives students the training they need to pursue careers working with young children in a variety of public and private environments. Students learn how to organize educational activities and routines, balance physical activity and rest, while mastering how to teach the basics of language, numbers, shapes and colors, and social skills.

In addition to classroom instruction, classes like Occupational Work Experience and AVC's on-site Child Development Center, provide further opportunities for students to get paid while getting hands-on training in early childhood environments. While many students go on to future careers in education, the program also provides an excellent foundation for those interested in social work, psychology, art therapy, and environmental design for children's programs.

If you are equity-minded, committed to ethical early childhood practices, and excited about supporting children and families, a degree or certificate from AVC's Child and Family Education program might be for you!
