2010 BSI Leadership Institute

California Community Colleges' Success Network

A Convening at:

UCLA Conference Center, Lake Arrowhead
uclaconferencecenter.com

In an intensive, one-week workshop, you will work with colleagues and leaders throughout the state to look deeply into answering two fundamental questions:

- How can I help my college establish, advance, and sustain a network that supports the success of our students, especially those who are underprepared for learning in college courses?
- How can we work together to create such networks among community colleges in California to support student success throughout our state?

I feel like for the first time in my life, someone has pulled me aside and has fostered my desire to be a leader . . . and has given me ideas on how to be a better one in my life, not just at my school

CCC BSI 2010

Building on its previous successes, the BSI is now integrating what has already been accomplished into a self-sustaining, statewide, professional learning network intended to promote overall increased student success. The participants in the summer institute will help lead this effort, allowing faculty, staff, and administrators to share and build upon existing knowledge, while at the same time creating opportunities for transformation. Foundational to this Network are evidence-based, knowledge building inquiry, capacity building, direct training, and resource development.
