Definition
Marketing is the dynamic field of study that recognizes and responds to the changing attitudes and demands of the economy. It has the goal of creating mutual satisfaction. It seeks to continue relationship building between the consumer and the product or service provider. Understanding the “why” and “how” of creating, distributing, pricing and promoting a product or service will be found within the curriculum.

Program Description
The Marketing program offers students the opportunity to recognize and respond to the changing attitudes and demands of the economy. Students gain the skills and knowledge needed to create satisfying exchange relationships between buyers and sellers. Studies in the Marketing program seek to continue relationship building between the consumer and the product or service provider by understanding the “why” and “how” of creating, distributing, pricing, and promoting a product or service. The program also offers those with an interest in e-commerce and web design the opportunity to gain practical insights into the techniques used by marketers to attract and retain consumers’ attention in a competitive information age.

Students must receive a minimum grade of “C” or better in all required core courses and the specific courses listed as program electives in order to qualify for the degree or certificate.
