Take Assessments

The first step in the educational and career planning process is learning about your personality, interests, skills, and values.

- Inner Heroes will have you look at yourself from a personality perspective. At the bottom of the results page, you may review "Education Themes" or "Occupations" based on your results.
- True Colors will ask you to look at yourself from a personality perspective. At the bottom of the results page, you may review "Education and Training Themes" or "Occupations" based on your results.
- MicroSkills asks you to view yourself in terms of transferable skills. Transferable skills can be used in many different careers or jobs. At the bottom of the results page, you may review the "Suggested Occupations" based on the skills you selected.
- Occ-U-Sort is considered a "reality check" because it is based on Labor Market Information (LMI) and asks you to decide which labor market requirements you are able and willing to meet, then eliminates occupations where you have indicated that you are unable or unwilling to meet that occupation's requirements.
